ON (AP) — The federal officials of three natural gas companies are in danger of being cut off from homes within the state getting fast relief.

President Carter's energy policy he announced by April 20 "is a substantial part of the problem," said one of the officials.

At his first news conference, Carter said the U.S. has imported oil and its oil during the winter.

"We have a reserve to meet our needs if we have a problem in the winter," he said.

"I'm going to try to make sure that all the natural gas companies and others that produce energy don't derive unwarranted profits when we cut back on consumption and when we encourage production."

A memorandum on the natural gas situation sent Monday night to presidential energy adviser James R. Schlesinger said the Federal Energy Administration had set up a "24-hour 'hot-line' system for distribution companies" Monday and immediately received three calls for help, quickly relayed to the Federal Power Commission.

The FPC said distributors now are "working out new arrangements" for gas deliveries were not in immediate danger.

The latest reports to Schlesinger plus various published reports show some over-all easing of gas shortages with improvement in the weather, allowing many laid-off workers to return to their jobs.

Podlesny said the UCCBML favored the formation of a "Commission on Public Decency" and were promised space in the survey to promote their viewpoint by the City Commission last Dec. 14.

During a January meeting, however, Podlesny said the Commission reversed its earlier stand, and refused to allow the UCCBML space.

"They broke their word," said Podlesny.

"Their survey is so biased it's unbelievable," he said. "It's designed to create opinion, not measure it."

Podlesny also said the poll ignores the most-part suggestions made by the UCCBML on how to improve the present pornography laws.

Podlesny said the survey is to gain the views of Provo citizens' opinions on the facts, "but I don't think Wignall said, 'people generally are not against pornography laws,'"

Execs pick new officer; to be sworn in Thursday

An ASBYU Organization's vice president has been appointed after a delay of three weeks.

Gordon Wilson, a senior with no previous Organizations office experience, was appointed by Randy Sloat, ASBYU president, and ratified by the Executive Council Tuesday in a closed meeting.

He will be sworn in at Executive Council meeting Thursday, Sloat said. He will officially take office after the ceremony.

Dave Kelley, former Organizations vice president, resigns Jan. 19 for reasons of poor health and a heavy class load. His assistant, Bob Hare, was named by Sloat to act as vice president in an unofficial capacity with all official business routed to Sloat.

Dave Kelley (left), former ASBYU Organizations vice president, briefs his replacement, Gordon Wilson. Wilson was picked by the Executive Council in a closed meeting Tuesday.

Wilson said his interest in clubs in general sparked his interest in the vacant Organizations vice presidency. He is a member of the Samuel Hall Society, a service club, and Beta Alpha Psi, the honorary accounting society.

He said he has noticed a dramatic deterioration among campus clubs since he joined Samuel Hall as a freshman.

"There seems to be a lack of interest and participation in clubs, he said, not only here at BYU but across the nation.

"This is due in part to a general lack of knowledge among students," he said, adding, "They don't know enough about clubs and how to get involved."

One of the first things Wilson said he will do will be to call together all Organizations people and club presidents. "We need to define the purpose of clubs and plan ways to raise more interest."

His first priority is to follow through on current office programs and plans as much as possible. "I am familiar with the basic programs," Wilson said, "but I'll need to be brought up to date."

His second priority, he said, is to "wind up gracefully any programs we can't finish in the two months of school left." He said he wants to prepare the office for the new administration next year.

Wilson said there are no policy changes being considered right now. He will wait until he knows more about the office before deciding whether changes are justified.

Kelley said he is in the process of explaining to Wilson current office programs and he "is learning quickly."

Kelley expressed disappointment that someone in the office who was already familiar with office policies and procedure was not appointed. He added that Wilson is a good man and no problems other than minor scheduling and staffing problems are anticipated.

"There won't be anything he can't handle, I'm sure," Kelley said. "I am very pleased that there won't be any policy changes."

Kelley said he will assist the new vice president in every way possible.

Sloat said Wilson was the best person for the job. He said Wilson was confident he could do the job.

"He worked for Bill Sadler, Academics vice president, last year," Sloat said, "and Sadler recommended him to me very highly."

Sloat said he did not feel it was vital for the replacement to have prior Organizations experience. He said he considered many people for the job, including those with experience, and felt Wilson was the best man.

UVH construction moves ahead

By GRACE WHITAKER
Universe Staff Writer

Utah's mild winter has been a disaster for local ski resorts, but the warm weather has been a boon in the construction of the Utah Valley Hospital addition.

"The weather has made ideal conditions for construction," said Cordell Nelson, the hospital's director of development. "We're ahead of schedule by four months," he said.

The $14 million addition will be complete and in full operation by the end of this year.

"Things are going very smoothly," he said. "We hope to move our radiology department into the addition at mid-year."

Moving the radiology department will relieve the crowded conditions of the old nurse's building which will be torn down shortly after the middle of this year, Nelson explained.

Construction of the seventh floor of the addition is complete and all but one tower in front of the building has been bricked, according to Nelson.

The new building will increase the hospital's floor space by 189,000 square feet, at least doubling Utah Valley Hospital (UVH). It will house 132 new beds, including a 24-bed intensive care and coronary care unit.

The addition will double the size of the radiology department and contain central processing facilities for nursing equipment, an enlarged pharmacy and expanded parking area, according to Richard McDermott, UVH assistant administrator.

The addition has two sections, a five-story nursing tower with 108 single beds and a three-story ancillary tower with an expanded emergency center, X-ray facilities, nine-room surgery unit and 16 out-patient beds, McDermott said.

The nursing tower will connect with the old hospital in two places.

Funding for the addition comes from two major sources, according to Nelson. About $10 million of the total cost will be provided by the Health Service Corporation of the LDS Church. The other $4 million is the projected goal of a telephone fund solicitation drive for the addition.

"We've received more than $2 million in private donations thus far, and it's a milestone for this county," Nelson said. "It's the largest donation ever received from telephone soliciting, according to Nelson."

"We're thrilled with the response from private individuals, businesses and church groups," Nelson added.

City protests federal fund distributions

Provo has joined many other cities across the nation in a protest of the way the federal government recently allocated monies in an anti-recession program.

Commissioner J. Earl Wignall and assistant community development director Dave Gunn met with Craig Smith, regional director of the Economic Development Association, to discuss Provo's failure to get any money under an EDA program.

Gunn said Smith assured them that the EDA will ask Congress for changes in the laws that govern the EDA's distribution of federal monies.

Last November Provo applied for $301,000 in EDA anti-recession funds to build a waterline to the airport, Gunn said. The purpose of the EDA program is to stimulate employment in economically depressed areas, said Gunn, but Provo and other cities with high unemployment did not receive funds while many municipalities with lower unemployment rates received monies.

Other cities including Pittsburgh and Portland, Ore., have protested the way those funds were distributed.

Gunn said that municipalities submitted area-wide unemployment statistics with their funds applications instead of strictly jurisdictional statistics. "This resulted in padded statistics which were really not accurate," Gunn noted. He said the municipalities were able to get away with that because of the vagueness of the guidelines.

Carter urges steps for nuclear balance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring that the United States has nuclear superiority over the Soviet Union, President Carter Tuesday said "very, very important" that both nations take fresh initiatives to restrain armaments while maintaining an over-all balance of power.

At his first White House news conference, Carter again expressed concern about Soviet treatment of dissident Russians and argued that taking Moscow to task on human rights issues should have no effect on the search for ways to curb the arms race.

The President's discussion of serious topics was laced with occasional humor as he faced reporters and a national television-radio audience, in an auditorium next door to the White House.

Questions about the handling of arms negotiations with the Soviets dominated the session, with Carter disclosing for the first time that he has asked Moscow to abandon the deployment of hard-to-detect mobile missile launchers, used for missiles of less than intercontinental range. He also suggested each country give the other advance notice of any planned testing of intercontinental missiles.

Carter, who has consistently decried international trafficking in arms, said that a proposed sale of concussion bombs to Israel, approved during the final months of President Gerald R. Ford's administration, "concerns me very much." He said he will decide within the next week "whether to cancel that sale."

On domestic topics, Carter said: "A long-range energy program he has promised to unveil by April 20 will 'require substantial sacrifices on the part of the American people' and will bar any unjustified profits by the oil and gas industries."

— He believes there is no danger of a Watergate scandal during his administration and said, "I know the Congress and others will be watching me closely, which I welcome."

Discussing the relative nuclear strength of the United States and the Soviet Union, Carter said, "At the present time, my judgment is that we have superior nuclear capability," although he later asserted, "I think that we are roughly equivalent."

The President said the Soviets have bigger missiles and bigger warheads but the United States has "more missiles, a much higher degree of accuracy."

A White House spokesman later said Carter misspoke himself — that the Soviets have more missiles than the United States.

Arguing that "it is necessary to have drastic reduction in dependence on atomic weapons," Carter laid out a timetable — without target dates — for an American-Soviet agreement "to stop the present growth and then to have substantial reductions" in each nation's nuclear arsenal.

Bridal Faire workshops to end today

The final sessions of the Bridal Faire workshops designed for the LDS bride-to-be are today starting at 6:30 p.m. in the Wilkinson Center.

The workshops have replaced the usual merchants display because many felt it was becoming too commercialized and the spiritual and emotional aspects of marriage needed to be dealt with, according to Karen Hill, Women's Office administrative assistant.

There are six workshops each hour, the first at 6:30 p.m. and the last beginning at 8:30 p.m. She said schedules and maps are available at the ELWC information desk and the Reception Center.

Miss Hill said 2,000 tickets have been handed out and more are available from the Women's Office, but everyone is invited, even without a ticket.

One half of the ticket is for the workshops and the other half is for the Bridal Fashion Show that will be Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Pres. and Mrs. Harold Clark, former president of the Provo Temple, will present a workshop entitled "Temple Preparation" where couples will make the decision whether or not to be married in the temple, tonight in 321 ELWC.

Miss Hill said the Wilkinson Gallery has a display of contemporary and international wedding dresses in conjunction with the Bridal Faire.

Eagles play significant role in culture, says Y professor

By BRUCE KING
Universe Staff Writer

Eagles have played a significant part in human culture, said Tuesday's forum assembly speaker.

Dr. Joseph R. Murphy, professor of zoology and eagle expert, traced the eagle's legendary and symbolic history from Middle East civilization in 400 B.C. to the present day. He cited many examples of the eagle's significant role and illustrated several of them with slides.

A graduate student in zoology from Boise, Idaho, Pat Benson, brought a live, young, golden eagle named "Puff" near the pulpit early in the forum lecture and Dr. Murphy described the physical characteristics of the bird.

Slides were shown of eagles and eagle symbols as Dr. Murphy spoke.

Dr. Murphy said an eagle is a large, diurnal bird of prey that is not a hawk, vulture, falcon or kite. Sixty of the 275 species of diurnal birds of prey are called eagles, he said. These eagles can be conveniently placed in four major groups: sea and fish eagles, serpent or carrier eagles, large, tropic-forest inhabiting eagles and the raptorial eagles.

Eagles appear on all continents, Dr. Murphy said, but "there is a greater concentration of species in the tropics," with only two present in North America.

Dr. Murphy cited several passages in the Bible that mentioned eagles. However, some experts say the eagle referred to in the Bible is not really an eagle but a lammergeier, "a great vulture of the mountains of Eurasia and Africa," he said.

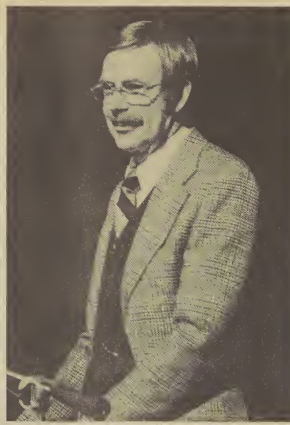

The eagle was a symbol of power throughout the centuries of classical civilization, Dr. Murphy said. The Romans used the eagle to symbolize the rise of the emperor's ascension to the stars.

"The eagle was almost universally venerated" among native American people of the past, Dr. Murphy said. They used it as a symbol for music, dance and warfare.

"The fascination of the eagle as a symbol" continues today, said Dr. Murphy. He cited Eagle Gate in Salt Lake City, Eagle Scouts and eagles on top of flagpoles as examples.

Dr. Murphy said he feels neither bald or golden eagles are in immediate danger of extinction. Minimum estimates for the continent set golden eagles at 50,000 and bald eagles at 20,000, he said.

The soaring eagle, real or symbolic, lifts the human spirits, and as long as the human spirit can soar, eagles will continue to fly high in their ancient inspirational capacity," Dr. Murphy said.

KSL appeals film seizure to 10th court

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — KSL Television has appealed to the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals a federal judge's seizure of a television camera and equipment.

Judge Willis W. Ritter had ordered U.S. marshals to seize the equipment from cameraman Robert Greenwell the night of Jan. 16 when Ritter was about to hear an appeal to stay the execution of executed killer Gary Gilmore.

The appeal documents say Greenwell, 26, saw Ritter and a U.S. marshal walking toward the federal building. It said he tried to film the judge outside the building when he ordered the equipment taken into custody. Ritter claimed Greenwell was "hiding like a thief in the night" and "leaped from cover and dashed toward the judge and the marshal..." Ritter claimed that constituted assault.

The circuit court was asked to release the camera and 195 feet of exposed film and that the film not be destroyed.

"It is patently clear from the seizure order and Mr. Greenwell's affidavit that KSL was engaged in news work. There is not a scintilla of evidence by any account that they were engaged in any other activity," the appeal said.

Idaho reverses ERA position

BOISE, Idaho — After a long, bitter debate, the Idaho Legislature completed action Tuesday rescinding its ratification of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

"This day will live in infamy," said Sen. Norma Dobler, D-Moscow, one of two women senators who led the battle against reversing the state's 1972 ratification of the proposed amendment.

Second Christian mission raided

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — Black guerrillas burned and looted offices of a second Christian mission, the government said Tuesday, while security forces searched rain-soaked bush for raiders who killed several white missionaries Sunday.

No casualties were reported in the raid on Nyashanu mission 125 miles southeast of Salisbury near the Mozambique border. The government did not say which church operated the mission or when the attack took place.

Release pled for Soviet activist

MOSCOW — More than 200 Soviet dissidents have appealed for the release because of ill health of Alexander Ginzburg, who disburses the funds supplied by novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn to aid political prisoners and their families.

In Washington, the U.S. State Department said it was "watching with concern" the treatment of the 40-year-old human rights activist and has made the Soviet government aware of its views.

Security warns students to watch out for theft

Almost $4,000 worth of purses, wallets and coats have been stolen since Sept. 1, 1976 according to Robert W. Keshaw, chief of BYU Security Police.

"There have been more than 53 purse or wallet thefts and 30 coat thefts since school started in September," Keshaw explained. "And there are more and more everyday. I want students to be aware these things are happening," he said.

Keshaw said security has picked up people who are not affiliated with BYU for stealing and those people have told them that they come to BYU just to steal. "I wish students would realize what a risk they're taking when they leave their belongings lying around out of eyeshot," he said.

According to theft statistics, the favorite spots for coats to turn up missing are in the Cannon Center, Morris Center and the Wilkinson Center. Purses and wallets are stolen from all over campus but seem to disappear more often in the Wilkinson Center and in both of the P.E. buildings.

Keshaw urged students to mark their coats so they can be identified and to report any missing item to Security so they can investigate and try to recover the stolen item.

J.S. Kinard to give talk

J. Spencer Kinard, voice of the Tabernacle Choir's "The Spoken Word," will speak Thursday at 10 a.m. for the Joseph Smith lecture series in the ELWC main ballroom.

Kinard is currently vice president of KSL in Salt Lake City and the director of the weekly broadcast of "The Spoken Word."

In 1930 the Tabernacle Choir added an inspirational "thought for the day" to their weekly program called "The Spoken Word." Elder Richard L. Evans, originator of the "Spoken Word" died in 1971, and in 1972 Kinard was appointed by church authorities to resume the broadcast.

Kinard recently has written a book called, "The Worth of a Smile," taken from some of the inspirational thoughts he has given on the broadcast.

Kinard served a mission to the Samoan Islands in 1960-63 and received his B.S. from the University of Utah in 1966.

He has had journalism experience as copy boy for the Salt Lake Tribune, announcer for KBBB in Centerville, reporter for KSL and writer-producer for CBS news in New York City.

Ray Tracey, star of the film "Joe Panther," explained his acting technique to a BYU audience last Wednesday in the Lamanite Lounge, BRMB.

'Joe Panther' speaks at Y

By TANYA PARKER
Universe Staff Writer

Ray Tracey, 23-year-old star of the recently released film "Joe Panther," was at BYU last Wednesday at a reception sponsored by the Indian Education Department in his honor.

Explaining how Tracey was selected for the role, "We were searching for a boy who could pull the acting off and had the wholesome look. Ray Tracey was the perfect Joe Panther," said Stewart H. Beveridge in a film about the movie he produced and directed.

"He was as natural as natural. That's what struck me, especially the scene with Ricardo Montalban and they were crying," said Bob Davis, a high school acquaintance attending at the reception.

The 22-year-old Spanish major said when he'd seen Tracey on campus shortly after his first movie "Indians" had been shot, he had asked him the secret to his acting ability.

"Bob, I just act normal," Tracey answered. "I don't think I have any special talent."

Tracey, himself, reiterated this as he spoke to students and friends. "They're interested in me because I'm an Indian actor, a full-blooded Navajo, and that's rare," he said. "They ask, 'Where have you gone to school - which acting school?' and I tell them I studied civil engineering at BYU."

Tracey's only acting experience prior to "Indians" and "Joe Panther" was in elementary school on the Navajo Indian Reservation in northern Arizona. "I was in 'Chicken Little' in second grade," he joked.

Speaking of his childhood on the reservation, Tracey told how he and his young Indian schoolmates watched cowboy and Indian movies.

He said they'd cheer whenever the U.S. Cavalry would appear on the scene to fight the savage Indians and it wasn't a few years later until he realized those savages were a representation of him and his own kind.

"It had an effect on me. You thought everyone was looking at you the way they saw Indians," Tracey said.

Tracey gave credit for his acting ability to his growth in the LDS Church and experiences with the Placement Program.

"The Placement Program, the church - that's where you get your training," he said to other Indians present at the reception. He pointed out that though he used to hate giving talks in Church, they provided him with the experience he needed in speaking and appearing before the public.

At BYU he became well-known in the Indian Education Department, and when Bryce Chamberlain of Personal Services was asked to suggest a couple of possibilities for a role in a movie about an Indian, Ray was one of those selected. From some 500 aspirants across the nation, Tracey was chosen for the title role of "Joe Panther."

The actor related some of his experiences in shooting "Joe Panther" while showing a film and slides. Most students who had seen the movie appeared to be interested in his crying scene with Ricardo Montalban, and one asked if the tears were real. "I had to cry five times for that particular scene," Ray said, because of the different camera angles that were needed. He said he tried a sixth time but there were no tears left.

A scene popular with the audience was the one in which Joe Panther wrestles with a 14-foot-long alligator and captures it. "It was very controlled," Tracey said, explaining that three different live alligators as well as a dummy were actually used in filming the scene.

"I did get on top of the real one when he was tied down," he said, adding that the alligator finally flipped him off in the mud and started rolling. Tracey and the others who had been holding down the reptile with ropes, however, were able to scatter out of the alligator's reach in time.

Being Indian, Ray was often consulted by the crew in scenes involving Indian practices. "Through this whole movie they came and asked my help on how Indians would feel about certain things," the actor told the audience.

Now that the filming of "Joe Panther" is over, Tracey lives a more normal life again in Utah. He and his wife Caroline live in Provo and are expecting their first child in March. In his spare time, Tracey fashions authentic Navajo jewelry which he sells during trips across the country. His acting days are by no means over, however. "Ray's opportunities are very great, because there are just not that many Indian actors that have done that much work before," said Jimm Hanni, representative of Artists Creations, Associates, producers of "Joe Panther."

He listed another movie and a Saturday morning TV series of "Joe Panther" as future possibilities in Ray's acting career.

Music at Midday will feature works for trumpet, piano, soprano and a Euphonium Octet, according to Jacob Bos, coordinator.

The concert, today at noon in the HFAC Madsen Recital Hall, will feature the following works: "Aria con variazioni" by Handel, performed by Kurt Bestor, trumpet; "Nocturne in E major" by Frédéric Chopin and "Humoresque" by Sergei Rachmaninoff, performed by Ruth Henry, piano; "The Rose" by Joseph W. Clokey, "Blue are Her Eyes" by Winter Watts, "Pirate Dreams" by Charles Hueter and "Floods of Spring" by Rachmaninoff, performed by Joyce Lee Kunz, soprano, and Natalie Beck, piano; "Sonatine" by Maurice Ravel, performed by Karen Kirkham, piano; and "Holy is God the Lord" from "Elijah" by Felix Mendelssohn, arranged by Ostrander and "Canzona" by Walter S. Hartley performed by the Euphonium Octet.

A euphonium is a brass-wind instrument resembling a tuba but having a higher range and more mellow tone. It has not had wide use recently but is becoming more popular, according to the BYU Music Department.

NBC tells Olympic plans

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Broadcasting Co., labeling the 1980 Moscow Olympics potentially "the biggest event in television history," disclosed plans Monday for 150 hours of coverage of the Games at the cost of upwards of $100 million.

"This is probably the most ambitious television project ever undertaken," said NBC President Herb Schlosser. "It will involve the most massive array of people, technicians and equipment ever assembled for one event."

NBC paid $85 million for rights to the Games, a figure which includes $35 million for the rights themselves and $50 million for technical facilities.

Not many shake-ups in cage ranking

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kentucky is again No. 3 in The Associated Press college basketball ratings this week, but Coach Joe Hall wouldn't have minded playing top-ranked San Francisco or runner-up UCLA Monday night.

"I don't believe anybody could control us the way we played tonight," he said following Kentucky's 97-57 rout of Florida State. "There is no question that we're going to improve."

While San Francisco, UCLA and Kentucky held onto the top three positions, Nevada-Las Vegas skidded from fourth place to 10th.

San Francisco, unbeaten in 23 games, routed St. Mary's, Calif. 103-77 and Nevada-Reno 98-81 last week to hold on to its No. 1 ranking. The Dons received 51 of 58 first-place votes and 1,115 of a possible 1,160 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

UCLA, which received six first-place votes and 1,009 points, beat Tennessee 103-89 and then upended Pacific-8 rivals Washington 75-65 and Washington State 72-59. The other first-place vote went to eight-ranked Minnesota, which bowed to fifth-ranked Michigan 86-80 Monday night.

Last week, Kentucky shaded Mississippi State 92-85 and buried Vanderbilt 113-73. The wildcats received 800 points.

Nevada-Las Vegas started out by edging Bradley 107-106. But they were beaten 88-84 by Illinois State and barely beat Rutgers 89-88.

Replacing the Rebels in the No. 4 spot is Wake Forest. The Demon Deacons beat Atlantic Coast Conference rivals Duke 89-80 and Virginia 80-72 to climb one spot from fifth. Michigan beat Indiana 89-84 and Ohio State 93-72 and jumped from seventh to fifth.

Louisville beat Memphis State and Providence and leaped from ninth to sixth. Alabama beat Vanderbilt and Louisiana State to edge up one spot to seventh and then downed Mississippi 72-68 Monday night. Minnesota beat Northwestern to move up to two rungs to No. 8. Marquette, 14-3 and sixth a week ago, lost by a point to Cincinnati and sank to No. 9, and Nevada-Las Vegas rounded out the Top Ten.

The second Ten consists of Tennessee, Cincinnati, Arkansas, North Carolina, Clemson, Providence, Syracuse, Arizona, Detroit and VMI. VMI is the lone newcomer to the rankings, replacing Purdue, which was 18th a week ago.

Spikers eye tourney after loss to Pepperdine

By BRENT NORTON
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU volleyball team will compete in a tournament Saturday in Las Vegas.

Teams entered in the tournament will come from California, Nevada and Utah.

Also entered is the national championship masters team, whose team members must be 35 or older.

The spikers from BYU were not very successful in competition during the weekend.

Pepperdine, the No. 2-ranked team in the nation, overwhelmed the Cougars, winning three straight games in a match held in the Smith Fieldhouse Saturday.

The Waves completely dominated the Cougars in the first two games of the best-three-out-of-five contest. The scores were 15-9 and 15-8.

However, in the third game the Cougars played much better, losing 16-14.

Coach Carl McGown, commenting on the loss, said, "I was not disappointed at the loss, but more at the way we played. I believe Pepperdine psyched us out. The boys played nervous."

Approximately 500 people turned out for the match, McGown said he felt bad that his team had not performed up to their ability. "I would like to thank all of those people who attended the match; their support was great," he said.

BYU's next home action will be on Feb. 19. The Cougars will host a tournament with teams from around this area entered.

Montana center ineligible

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — The University of Montana will face the remainder of its basketball season — including two league games each against Idaho State and Boise State and single contests with Weber State and Northern Arizona — without starting center Lee Johnson.

UM Athletic Director Harley Lewis said Monday the NCAA had notified him that Johnson was ineligible and would lose his athletically related financial support for the rest of the school year.

Lewis said the school would appeal the ruling and an order that the 6-10 Johnson forfeit financial aid.

He said loss of eligibility and aid is "the maximum penalty in this situation." UM officials hope the NCAA will reduce the penalties during the appeal procedure, Lewis said.

He said Johnson's ineligibility stemmed from a rule requiring an undergraduate high-school athlete to wait a year after his high-school age group graduated to take a General Education Development (GED) test for college eligibility.

s working on his ictice, which may proved performance at Utah, Scott hit three for six from the field and 2-2 from the foul line. Runia canned the Cougars' first six points in the second half.

Shooting eye

Arnold feels Runia has an outstanding shooting eye that should improve with more experience. "He probably makes fewer mistakes than most freshman."

Scott, on the other hand, feels that playing well and starting as a freshman is difficult because of the feeling. "You think you're so, young, you're not supposed to do it."

But Scott hasn't given up on himself or the team yet. He feels the Cougars' current losing spell is only a slump and that they will eventually snap out of it. "We'll never give up," says Runia. "I think we'll wind up pretty high in the standings. I can't figure out what's wrong with us. We're doing the same as the first of the year."

Scott's first interest in basketball came from his brothers. "I was always tagging along with them," Scott says. But maybe some of his interest in sports also rubbed off from his father, Thys, a soccer player in Holland before he came to the United States 25 years ago.

Scott says the missionaries were the ones who persuaded his parents to come to America. "My dad was inactive, and Mom was a convert to the church. They (the missionaries) told them to come to America, so they came."

Scott speaks a little Dutch and has two older brothers who went to Holland on missions. "So I've picked it up pretty good," he says.

Mission

Runia has seriously thought about going on a mission but says, "It's a hard decision to make. We've had general authorities talk to us."

"If you're a real benefit to the team, it's good for BYU to have a winning tradition. That'll help out the missionary work a lot more."

Working in a lumber yard over the summer, Scott became good friends with former high school rival Greg Anderson. Both Scott and Greg agree it's fun playing together on the same team and feel they make a good combination at the guard line.

"We like playing together," Scott says. "We were rivals in high school. We got to be good friends here. We like to press and try to steal the ball. He's pretty quick too."

Defended by Utah's Earl Williams, Scott Runia drives toward basket. Runia has earned a starting position as a freshman.

Greg won't argue with that. "I think we know how each other plays," Anderson says. "We played together on the All-Star team and played together over the summer. We both like to set each other up for shots. I think we play well together."

Greg admires Scott's leadership, all-around ball handling and court savvy.

"He's pretty steady, doesn't make a lot of mistakes," Anderson says. "Arnold and Godfrey are in almost complete agreement when it comes to Scott's credentials. The compliments flow easily and are many. With a little experience, the Cougar guard line may have found the quick, good outside shooter the team will need in the years to come."

Court overturns suit against Bill Sharman

DENVER (AP) — The 10th Circuit Court of Appeals has overturned a $425,000 damage suit verdict against former Utah Stars basketball Coach Bill Sharman and the Los Angeles Lakers.

The circuit court ordered the case be retried in U.S. District in Salt Lake City before a judge from outside the district.

In 1975, the Utah federal court jury awarded damages against Sharman, now general manager of the National Basketball Association's Lakers, and the team after a trial before federal court Judge Willis W. Ritter.

The suit was filed in 1971 by Mountain States Sports, Inc., owned by Bill Daniels, the Stars' owner. The Stars, of the now-defunct American Basketball Association, went bankrupt in December 1975.

Ritter had instructed the jury that he had found as a matter of law that Sharman had a valid contract which he breached in June 1971 to coach the Lakers. Ritter directed the jury to return such a verdict.

Sharman had testified that he had no valid contract because the Stars failed to honor provisions of his agreement dealing with a pension plan and option to buy stock in the team.

The circuit court ruled that Ritter found the parties had been negotiating in good faith until Sharman quit the Stars. The court said good-faith negotiations are not enough to turn an unenforceable contract into a valid and enforceable one.

Stadium-crashing pilot found guilty in Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP) — The pilot of a light plane that crashed into Memorial Stadium minutes after a football playoff game was found guilty Monday of three of the four charges against him.

Baltimore City Judge Daniel Friedman ruled that Donald N. Kroner, 33, was guilty of two counts of malicious destruction of property and one count of reckless and unsafe operation of an aircraft.

Kroner crashed a plane into the nearly-deserted upper deck of the stadium about 10 minutes after the Pittsburgh Steelers-Baltimore Colts National Football League playoff game last December.

However, Judge Daniel

Friedman found Kroner innocent of a charge of flying low over the stadium. Friedman said the city ordinance applied only to commercial aircraft.

Continuing education

Program rated for

Noted doctor

Y counseling clinic he elected to national board

Dr. Robert Stammann
... new AAMHC board member

By GENE BAERSCHMIDT
Universe Staff Writer

BYU not only has one of the largest continuing education programs in the world but it is also used as a model by other programs.

According to Stanley A. Peterson, dean of the Division of Continuing Education, BYU's enrollment in continuing education last year was 325,000, making it one of the major programs in the country and the largest in enrollment in the world.

At BYU, continuing education is anything outside the regular day school program he said. This included evening school, home study, off campus conferences, special courses and conferences, and the study abroad program.

According to Peterson, continuing education is a growing field all over the country. He said, "There are many studies out now which show that the part-time student, the student who is going on a continuing education basis, is the majority student. The full-time student is now in the minority. He added, "The national trend now is to take the education from the campus out to the student, rather than bring the student to the campus."

Some of the reasons why continuing education is blossoming according to Peterson, are because people are going back to school to finish degrees, to upgrade themselves professionally or to re-accredit themselves because their fields are changing so often.

"Our program ranges from a basic literacy course, where we are teaching members of the church in Latin America to read, all the way to a doctoral program," Peterson said.

"BYU is looked to nationally and used often as an example of an institution which is moving in some creative ways in continuing education," Peterson said.

"Mormonism, Medicine and Miracles" will be the topic of the Alumni College lecture tonight at 8 in the Alumni House.

According to Alumni College Director Maggie Griner, Dr. Anne G. Osborn, a neurologist at the University of Utah Medical Center, and a convert to the Mormon Church, will be the guest lecturer.

Dr. Osborn graduated from Stanford Medical School in 1970 at the top of her class, served a surgical internship at the LDS hospital and a three-year residency in radiology at Stanford, Mrs. Griner said. In 1974 she won the Picker Fellowship, a prestigious national award in radiology.

Robert F. Stammann of the BYU Marriage Counseling Clinic, was elected to the Association of Marriage Counselors.

Dr. Stammann was a six-member board for the AAMHC is the national and family counselor of the United States with in this country and Canada.

In 1975, over two million were married and one were granted, acc. Stammann. "The average marriage has declined seven years. Our staff clinic is dedicated to cope with this," he said.

Family life lectures will emphasize home

The twelfth annual Virginia F. Cutler Faculty Lecture will be given by R. E. Dansie, assistant professor of interior environment, at 7:30 tonight in the SFLC step-down lounge.

As part of Family Life Week, Dansie will illustrate how the home is a laboratory for family leadership and should be so sensitively designed that it is supportive of the lifestyle of each family member.

According to Mark Hurst, administrative assistant to the dean of the College of Family Living, Dansie was selected because he has made significant contributions in his professional field.

His talk is entitled "Home: Laboratory for Family Growth and Self-Actualization."

Also as part of Family Life Week, Mrs. Bonaro Overstreet, author and lecturer, will speak in the Varsity Theater at 11 a.m. today on "Living Under One Roof."

Hurst also said a brown-bag lecture by John Siphard, of the department of Interior Environment, will be presented today at noon in the SFLC foyer. His topic will be "A Promise to You: Knowledge and Beauty."

The Family Research Conference will present research papers Thursday and Friday starting at 10:00 a.m. in the varsity theater.

According to Dr. Boyd Rollins, professor of CDFR, scholars west of the Mississippi River have been invited to present research papers on the family. Areas of research include "Child Rearing Habits of the Very Rich," "The Ecology of Human Development" and "Anxiety in Children of Parents Practicing Transcendental Meditation."

Featured speakers will be Dr. Diana Baurnd, research psychologist at the Institute of Human Development at the University of California at Berkeley, Dr. Urie Bronfenbrenner, professor of psychology, human development and family studies at Cornell University and Dr. Elliott D. Landau, professor of child growth and development in the Department of Education at the University of Utah.

Weight control to be analyzed

"Weight Control: A Combination of Nutrition and Exercise" will be the topic of a panel discussion sponsored by the Counseling Center Thursday from noon until 1:30 p.m. in 321 ELWC.

The discussion will be the second of four panel discussions planned this semester, according to Dr. Jonathan M. Chamberlain, panel moderator and coordinator.

Guest panelists, Dr. Garth Fisher, director of the BYU Human Performance Center and Diana McGuire from the Food Science and Nutrition department, will discuss some of the latest methods of weight control and will suggest ways to govern food intake and use energy.

RM's plan temple trip

The New Mexico-Arizona Mission will have a reunion Thursday at 6 p.m. in the Provo Temple.

The missionaries will attend a session at the temple and then go to Pres. Paul Felt's house at 1455 Fir Circle, Provo for refreshments.

Pres. Felt said the session will be over at 8:30 or 9 p.m. and the group will spend an hour or so at his home afterwards.

All missionaries and their spouses are invited, he said, with the purpose of the reunion to renew old acquaintances and enjoy camaraderie.

Pres. Felt said the reunion is held once between the regular general conference missionary reunions that are held in April and October. This interim reunion is always a temple excursion, he said, and "lets our missionaries get together every three months instead of every six months."

Drill teams to compete

The annual Wasatch Drill Meet Saturday at the Smith Fieldhouse will include various competing drill teams from BYU, Idaho State and the University of Utah.

According to Steve Lundgren, executive officer for the Association of U.S. Army at BYU, the meet will be at 9 a.m. in the west annex, SEH, and is sponsored by the Army ROTC.

He said the winner of the last competition was the "Nauvoo Rifles," the BYU Army ROTC team.

Lundgren said the judging is in three phases, inspection, regulation drill and exhibition drill. Col. Bartley E. Day, professor of military science at BYU, said the Nauvoo Rifles and the Army Sponsors have been invited to compete in the Southern California Invitational Drill Meet March 11.

Bank gives Y $10,000

BYU has received a gift of $10,000 from the Provo office of First Security Bank of Utah, according to Donald T. Nelson, director of the Development Office of the LDS Church.

The gift will be made in installments of $2,000 per year for the next five years. This contribution is in addition to an $1,800 scholarship presented annually by the Bank to a BYU student.

Max Elliott, vice president and general manager of the Provo office, stated that the contribution was specifically for the new addition to the Harold B. Lee Library.
